OUR LONDON LETTER

(FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT)

It is, perhaps, just as well to recall the fact that the Anglo-Japanes Traxt, which was signed on January 30, 1902, is to remain in force for five years from that date, and that it contained a stipulation to the effect that if neither party to it notified, twelve months before the expiration of that period, an intention to terminate it, it should continue in force until the expiration of one year from any date on which either of them should denomous it. The Treaty, therefore, primarily holds good until annary 30, 1907, but his Majesty's be seriously considering what steps, in the not very distant future, will have to be taken in regard to it. The considerations that necessarily arise are whether it should be renewed in its present form, or whether a new Treaty should be entered into, giving a much wider and more comprehensive scope to thi alliance between the two countries. The subject is one of the most vital importance, and we may rost assured that it has Lord Lands when 'every earnest and anxious attendam lands and the countries of the subject is one of the most vital importance, and we may rost assured that it has Lord Lands when 'every earnest and anxious attendam lands and the countries of the subject is one of the most vital importance, and we may rost assured that it has Lord Lands when 'every earnest and anxious attendam lands and the countries of the subject is one of the most vital importance, and one should be expected that it has Lord Lands when 'every earnest and anxious attendam lands and the countries of the subject is one of the most vital importance, and we may rest assured that it has Lord Lands when 'every earnest and anxious attendam lands and the lands and the lands and lands and the lands and l faddists. As matters stand, the way is smoothed for the moderate drinker to become a total abstainer gradually if so disposed, a process which constantly produces the effect desired by the testotal crussders. They would do will to reflect, therefore, whether the came they have at heart—a right good cause, in itself—would be likely to benefit by barring out from membership of the association every soldier who could not see his way to subscribe to their particular shibboleth.

We have it now, on the authority of the Army Council, that a number of men serving in the Army Reserve have applied to be taken back to the colours because of their inability to find work. It is impossible to over-estimate the seriousness of the announcement, in view of the fact that the whole recruiting problem turns on this question of the employment of soldieri on their return to evil life. Things have been tending this way for some time past, and it is livering in due effect on the recruiting have been tending this way for some time past, and it is livering in due effect on the recruiting to join the ranks of the unemployed in return to join the ranks of the unemployed in return for serving their King and country, it is unreasonable to expect respectable parents to allow them to enlist if they have the power to prevent them. Once again the Channel Turnel scheme, which has been in abeyance for over twenty years, it lives to be dragged into the light and sariously over the second as a practical project. The matter has been matter has been matter has been matter has been such as the coline was expressed that their imwanners when the national approval might be sought with reasonable propects of success. The support of Prances and its investors is reckored as assured. It is from this side of the Channel that opposition will come, if at all. Twenty years ago the argument that killed the Bill was that of the increased risk of invasion. The that of the increased risk of invasion. The contril relations now existing between Prance and England, of course, discount this objection to some extent. It is a pity that Mr. Raffour, in his recent estimate of the chances of invasion, could not have taken this possible factor into account. As to the commercial advantage to both countries of such a tunnel, if none con-structed, there could be but little question.

I am glad to see that the Motor Union have determined to take stringent measures against reckless driving, but they will not need to lose time if they have hopes of doing anything to ward off fresh and drastic legislation. Slowly but surely the motor omnibus is displacing its older rival, the horse-drawn vehicle.

Two new motor omnibuses were put to-day on

In the opinion of Mr. Kingham, the Secretary of the London General Omnibus Company, as well as Mr. Duff, the manager of the London Road Car Co., the new vehicle has come to stay. As regards the financial side of the question, neither is willing to expression an opinion. Some of the Colonial ecclesisation digol-taries seem to have a poor opinion of the mother-country.
